REAPING THE WHIRLWIND.

THE wires are too busy with affairs in Mexico to give more than a meager account of the doings in Los Angeles, where the bandit and housebreaker flourish and the ordinary citizen is subject to the depredations of bands of desperadoes who ravage the surrounding country with impunity. The condition has become so grave that arrangements have been made for building a local stockade capable of imprisoning 5000 offenders, most of whom have been driven from decent homes by the racialities of the plundering hordes of land sharks whose career has been unchecked by the Los Angeles newspapers. So long as these gentry were willing to come through with a lot of full-page advertising the Los Angeles Times and other papers of the southern burg found it convenient to close their eyes to the perfidy of thieves who made a specialty of preying on the poor by robbing them of their savings.

At last the papers have been compelled to call on the authorities to take action. They abetted an evil that eventually mastered them and now they seek to check the rapacity of crime that menaces the very foundation of their city.

Under the head of "The Bandit Trail of One Week," the Los Angeles Times prints a column of hold-ups and robberies, where the victims were beaten, shot or slain in defense of their property. This paper admits that neither life nor property is safe in that town, and some concerted action by citizens is urged as a means of defense against the growing evil. That the readers of the Bonanza may judge for themselves of the truth of these statements, the following extract will speak:

"Criminals have descended like a cataract upon Los Angeles and stern steps are being taken by the police to cope with them. New records for banditry have been established. The authorities are engaged with the great number of reports of violence. They warn the people to be on their guard and to be constantly vigilant.

"It is the accompanying violence that has made this crime wave particularly dreaded. The police are skirmishing with every resource to combat the horde of incoming undesirables.

"Almost as if the vicious had fads and fashions like the milliners and clothiers, the present rage in crime is banditry. The shift and nerveless accomplish sneaking hold-ups under dark trees where the chance of detection is slight.

"The bold walk into stores, offices and trains and loot their prey in the shadow of a revolver.

"George Home, the active agent in directing the city's line of defense against the disorganized bands of undesirables, has analyzed the situation as follows:

"Idle men make dangerous men. We have many idle men here now. A great many men who work during the summer and save their money, come here to live quietly and comfortably through the winter. They are rough men. Oftentimes they lose their money through dissipation or recklessness. Then they become desperate. We held a conference yesterday in which the police judges and the chief came to the decision that the strictest treatment would be meted out. If necessary, we can put 5000 men on the rock pile and hold them there for six months. They will pay for their keep by their work. We will correct their idleness.

"I think the fact that the men hold up people instead of committing thefts is a favorable sign. It shows that the men are desperate, but not experienced. So they will not be so difficult to capture. They are not experts. I believe that the new squad will be able to cope with every man that enters the city without purpose, funds or employment."

The motto of the Elks is never to let the right hand know what the left hand does in the way of charity. Thanks to the generous spirit of Tonopah, the ball last evening was well patronized and productive of a fund that will be well distributed.

The railroads are going to the eternal damnation how-ows, according to the president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who sees nothing but ruin and desolation ahead for that corporation. Taxes have increased 111 per cent in a year. In the good old times the Pennsy dictated what taxes it should pay and let the common people do the rest. The Quakers are slow, but they finally got wise to the truth.

The Nevada Sugar company has taken the advice of the Bonanza and begun to advertise, in a reluctant way, as the notice reads that "This advertising is given ungrudgingly, but at some sacrifice." Some day the company will learn that advertising is not charity, and will pay only when done judiciously and on a comprehensive plan in the consuming centers.

Miss Phoebe Cousins, first woman to occupy the position of United States marshal, should have a monument. She died a pauper, despite the fact that she was the first suffragist of the country who made good. Women are prone to forget such trifles until it is too late to remember.

Even the poor hen comes in competition with Chinese cheap labor. Seventy-two thousand eggs are on their way from the Orient to humble the lordly American fowl.

B. P. O. E. Best People On Earth. Well, don't you think so? A score of poor families will add their benisons to the order between this and the first of the year.

Porfirio Diaz has been transferred to the active list, but the wires do not report any celerity on the part of the old man to come back.

San Francisco has merged the newspaper business until nothing remains for the poor printer but the prospect of hard work.

Caminetti has found a foe worthy of his prowess in the despised hookworm. He is on the warpath and going to stay there.

A New York milkman was sentenced to thirty days in jail for watering milk. This comes from having cheap water.

If the railroads persist in this sanitary drinking cup exclusion every one will have to carry his own flask.
